Objectives

To familiarize students with the British Council APTIS Assessment and English Online self study course and its relevance to employability and workplace communication requirements

Summary Report

The Placement and Career Guidance Cell organized an Institutional Level British Council Orientation Programme in collaboration with the British Council to enhance students' communication skills and employability competencies. The programme was conducted at the New Seminar Hall and organized in two sessions to ensure the participation of students from various academic streams.

The resource person from the British Council delivered a detailed orientation on the British Council APTIS Assessment and the English Self-Study Online Course. The APTIS Assessment was explained as a standardized and reliable tool designed to evaluate students' Listening, Speaking, Reading, and Writing (LSRW) skills, along with Grammar and Vocabulary proficiency. Students were informed that the assessment provides an accurate measure of their English language ability aligned with international standards.

The resource person highlighted that upon successful completion of the Aptis Assessment, students would receive a British Council certificate, which serves as a valuable addition to their academic and professional profile and enhances their employability prospects.

Further, the English Self-Study Online Course was introduced as a structured certification programme aimed at improving overall communication skills. The course focuses on developing fluency, confidence, and professional communication through self-paced learning modules. The certification received after completing the course was emphasized as an added advantage for students appearing for campus placements and interviews.

The session was interactive and informative, with students actively engaging by clarifying their doubts regarding assessment structure, course duration, certification benefits, and career relevance. Feedback collected from the participants reflected a positive response and strong interest in enrolling for both the Aptis Assessment and the English Self-Study Online Course.

Outcome of the Program

Students gained clear understanding of the British Council APTIS Assessment and its role in evaluating LSRW, Grammar, and Vocabulary skills. Increased awareness about the benefits of internationally recognized certification.

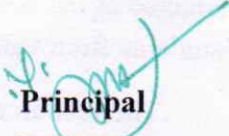

Enhanced motivation among students to improve communication skills through structured learning. Improved readiness for placements, interviews, and professional communication
